

'05 SUPER SERIES FINALS ON DVD

Pull up a courtside seat—in your living room

Okay video fans. Dust off the plasma, find a place on the sofa and get ready for some serious squash DVD's from Jean DeLierre and his company, SquashLive.com. He caught the entire 2005 Super Series Finals and they're available now on DVD. Buy the sets he has available and you'll have it all.

Featuring showdowns between Lincoou and Shabana, Palmer and Power and plenty of others, each DVD will take you front and center to some of the best action on the men's professional tour. Slow-mo instant replay? Check. Up close action from the front corners? Check. Clear visibility? Of course. And some extras that are both fun and entertaining.

Like a segment of nothing but the best rallies of the entire event. Or how about some outtakes featuring questionable calls—"when lets should be strokes" for example.

Oh yeah, and the commentary by Alan Thatcher and Charles de Saint-Marie sitting live at courtside fills whatever gaps you might want filled.

The bottom line is, if you're looking for quality DVD's with hours and hours of top-notch squash, there's really no other place to look than to Jean DeLierre and squashlive.com.

BLACK KNIGHT BALLS

Introducing an alternative ball for softball aficionados

American consumerism wouldn't be what it is without having a multitude of choices when shopping for just about anything, especially when it comes to brand variety. Well, welcome to the new world of double yellow dot squash balls. For years companies have been trying to crack the stranglehold on the squash ball market held by, well, you know.

Black Knight has quite possibly hit the jackpot. BK has brought their own version of the double yellow dot to market and is receiving praise all over the place. We put some of the balls to the test and are duly impressed by its playability and durability. The bounce is true and consistent, and they have been holding up to punishment extremely well. We even pulled a couple of these beauties out after the mark had been rubbed off—not once did the unsuspecting opponent question the ball.

And that's not all. Black Knight has also released an altitude ball (the green dot which looks more like a teal dot) that has been receiving similar platitudes.

And their blue dot for beginners looks to be a hit as well. It plays just a bit faster with very little warm up, which is the whole point.

So check them out. You might just find yourself loading up your bag with this knight in shining armor before you know it.
